HUSSEY & JORDAN, PROPRIETORS
JOHN R. HUSSEY, - - EDITOR

MR. VANDERBILT's purchase of 12,000 tons of English steel rails galls the American manufacturers sorely. It is a direct blow to their professing ability to turn out rails as good in quality and as capable of wear as the products of the best British mills. The American makers had thought themselves secure in their monopoly of the home market, the duty of $28 a ton on steel rails having shut all importations for two years. Now Vanderbilt pays a bonus of $12 a ton or $14,000, as ex-Congressman Daniel J. Morell of Philadelphia, president of the American Iron and Steel Association, asserts, because of his hostility to our steel interests. Vanderbilt says he buys abroad because he gets a guarantee that the English rails will wear 12 years or be replaced if they fail before that time. American rails wear but five years, a prominent New York Central official claims. Mr. Morell retorts that Vanderbilt asked for no such guarantee at home, where five years' wear is the usual limit. On easy grades and straight lines either rail will wear 12 years, he says, but neither will outlast five years on steep grades, short curves and in the yards where heavy engines are continually stopping and starting. Mr. Morell says that no complaint has come from the million and a half tons of American rails put down in the last six or eight years, and thinks Mr. Vanderbilt's action is intended as an assault upon the tariff that has protected American producers. We believe that American railroad masters will be greatly surprised at the admission that five years is the limit of an American steel rail in constant service and that thousands of tons have been laid upon the basis of 12 years' vitality. Of course, it is too soon to gather a wide experience, except as to those first laid, what the average length of wear is, but the question is now certainly open for testimony.

The American iron trade cannot afford to discuss the matter, as if Vanderbilt had no right to patronize foreign manufacturers. It certainly puts our mills on their mettle to do their best, for if their rails are not equal to those of English make, it will soon be found out by practical test. It is claimed that the tariff still keeps up the price of American rails at least $10 above what they can be manufactured for, and the whole discussion is likely to hasten the day of revenue reform. It incidentally suggests also that there has been quite enough exaggeration of the triumph of American industry over the English in the markets of the world.

The Massachusetts Labor Bureau has been publishing some most valuable statistics on the condition of labor in that State. The number of unemployed people in Massachusetts at the beginning of 1878 was 28,500; at the beginning of the present year it was 23,000—a reduction of 5,000. This report—that less than 2 per cent. of the population is out of employment—is a flattering one, and it is to be hoped that the rest of the country can make as good a showing. In the matter of wages and the prices of goods and provisions, a comparison is made between 1878 and 1890. It was found that wages were higher last year than before the war in all occupations save cloth-making and ship-building. There was an increase of 32 per cent. in the payment of agricultural laborers, 47 per cent. in that of blacksmiths, 32 per cent. in that of bakers, etc. The average increase in the wages of 63,456 employees was 24.4 per cent. The price of living had increased, but not as wages. Groceries were 7 per cent. higher than in 1860, provisions 28 per cent. higher, rents 25 per cent. higher, while dry goods had fallen 8 per cent. The average cost of living was 14 per cent. higher. That is, the wages would go on the average, 10 per cent. further than in 1860, clearly showing that the workingmen of Massachusetts are better off to-day than they were before the war. There seems to be no reason to doubt that it is true; that the workingmen themselves do not appreciate it, is doubtless due to the fact that their wants and desires have increased in the past nineteen years; they live more comfortably now than then, and would think themselves treated badly did they have to go back to the simple life they lived in antebellum days.

The subject of the introduction of the metric system of weights and measures into the United States came up for discussion at the recent sessions of the Academy of Sciences, which adjourned last Friday. The Academy, of course, favors the use of this simple and convenient system, whose adoption by the people, as by the scientists, of all nations, is much to be desired. Time and a certain amount of trouble and cost will, as pointed out by the executive departments in their reply to a Congressional inquiry on the subject, be necessary to make the change practicable. Thorough instruction in the new system should be provided in the public schools. When the metric system becomes the only one, the backward school boy will find it much easier to master than the complicated one now in use. Real estate records would need to be revised, scales and instruments adapted to the old system would need to be re-adjusted. These inconveniences would not be found insuperable, and would soon be outweighed by the increased convenience of reckoning under the metric system. The United States and Great Britain should both reform their systems of weights and measures, and should act in concert.

The Northern Radicals have sent about $300 to St. Louis to aid the destitute Southern negroes there on their way to Kansas—"only this, and nothing more." Zack Chandler, indeed, promised to give 300 of them work on his Michigan farm if they will pay the way up there and "find themselves." But this can scarcely be regarded as charity, as a good many other Northern Radicals would probably accept cheap negro labor on like terms, but though unwilling to help their victims, the Radicals are busily at work trying to inflame this movement, hoping to use it as campaign material in 1880, when they can vote about "quelling negroes fleeing from their murderers." As a consequence they have organized a half dozen societies whose purpose it is to help along this movement without costing their members anything, and have called meetings in almost all the Northern cities to express sympathy for the emigrating negroes without, however, expressing it in the form of dollars and cents. Such meetings have been held in Chicago, Cincinnati and Boston, and last Saturday in New York. They consist solely in a denunciation of the South and its people. The Republicans are willing to help the negroes with a little blushing talk, but they will give them no other charity than this.

LORILLARD's horse "Parole" is the most distinguished American abroad at present for the moment quite eclipsing Gen. Grant. His winning the Newmarket handicap is a real international victory, and of a sort calculated to exalt English opinion of American capabilities and shake English faith in perpetual insular supremacy more than a dozen warnings of Gladstone. All the sporting editors in England are loudly generous in recognizing the beauteous triumph of "Parole" in beating the favorite "Isomony"; and the betting men in London, the night after the race, showed what they thought by putting eight to one on "Parole" for the City and Suburban handicap. The Valdosta Times, Covington Star, Dunlap Courier, Sanderson Courier, Atlanta Journal, and Sunday Gazette, and some others not now remembered, are for Tilden as the next nominee of the democratic party for president. It would take the party a long time to find a man better qualified to fill the place.

CURRENT OPINION.

Tip us a Ballad.

At the Constitution.

Dear our esteemed contemporary, the New York Tribune, understand that the solid republican gang in the house have voted and given vent to the "feel claimants" to step forward and bid in the nomination of the treasury? Tip us a ballad, good Mr. Crofton!

AGENTS of the British government have been purchasing mules in Kentucky and other States for a week or two for the use of the army in South Africa. A sale of eighty-five head was made in Louisville during last week at $125 per head for the round lot, the quality of the stock averaging prime. It is supposed that the purchases in that and other States have been completed for the present. A British transport arrived in New York last week to take on the stock purchased. Her facilities are for 400 head, all of which have been secured. Her destination is the Cape of Good Hope. It is given out that experiments with mules for army transportation in South Africa have been very satisfactory, and have broken down a strong prepossession in the service in favor of horses. It is also intimated that the American system of transportation is becoming more and more popular, and it is possible that this sentiment may open a permanent market for a new American product.

THE war between Peru and Chili threatens to involve English interests. Indeed, nothing, it seems, can be done now-a-days in any quarter of the globe that does not involve English interests. The government announced in Parliament yesterday that men-of-war would be sent to the Pacific to protect English interests there. It was only a few months ago that England very nearly became embroiled in a war with Peru, in consequence of a squabble over a ship; this time the trouble is with Chili, which, it is charged, has been seizing English vessels. The matter is a small one, but appears to have created a great deal of excitement in London, as the present English administration is apt to go to war on such slight pretexts. It has now two wars on its hands which arose from this very protection of English interests, and it would not be surprising to see Beaconsfield involve England in this South American squabble on similar grounds. The British lion is particularly fretful and pugnacious just now.

The "Kansas fever" is reported to have spread to Virginia, and broken out in the counties bordering on the James and Rappahannock rivers. In Fauquier, Fairfax and Culpeper, there is also some excitement among the negroes, but not as great as among those on the James. It is prophesied that a thousand negroes will be on their way West from these counties before the end of April. The fare to Kansas from Virginia is fifty dollars, and only the richer class of negroes will be able to go. Others are saving up, and declare they will go West as soon as they can raise the money to pay their way there.

Indians Who say that Custer Killed Himself.

Correspondence Chicago Tribune.

An Indian account of the death of Custer will, I think, prove uninteresting. The Indians, like the general stampede, Custer tried to rally his men around him. He waved his pistol in the air and shot it off to attract his men. Two or three times he did this, and the Indians still continued to advance, one of the soldiers tried to run away. Custer fired at him and killed him, and then, seeing the case hopeless, the Indians gathered around from all parts, turned and ran over himself, preferring to die by his side. The Indians say that as he was a chief, but they are not certain of the fact. Rain-in-the-face took a soldier prisoner, but he was not allowed to live long, as he was to be a dam to the nation. The Indians here all agree on one thing—that the number of Indians killed thirty-six; they give their names.

He Overlooked a Few.

From the Milwaukee Sun.

A reporter of a Cincinnati paper has been investigating the charges against Dr. Keifer, Superintendent of the Soldiers' and Orphans' home at Xenia, Ohio, and on the 14th girl, during interview, was found dead. The doctor had kissed her. The doctor is 70 years old, and it is not strange, under the circumstances, he should have overlooked a few, and thus given cause for the unsavory scandal that has been started.

An Important Invention.
Mr. W. B. Surles has a valuable attachment to the sewing machine. It meets a want long felt in the perfection of this indispensable necessity to the household.

The treadle power of the sewing machine has always a serious drawback. The health of ladies has often been destroyed by the strain upon their muscles in the use of the treadle. This is obviated by Mr. Surles' invention. The power is now entirely transmitted by a belt, and the treadle is entirely removed, so that the treadle will not go over to the next term and not, as now, to the end of the socket.

The rocks from the lighter is thrown upon the works in such a way as to make them assume a cone-like shape where the water and the action of the storm only pre-empted the rock to the bottom and thus increased the width of the base of the structure, which in reality was only the accomplishment of work which was necessary to give proper strength and durability to this great ocean wall.

We call the negroes an imitative race, but what can be more imitative than the course of the white desperado in the West? In Texas, who has only adopted the name of his master, he dress of the Indian, but like him, is only held in consideration among his comrades by the number of scalps of murdered victims that adorn his belt?

When one of them gets up to thirty and has an escape-cautious and hanging he is a hero of the first water, and king among smaller murderers.

At the New York Dog Show.
"Who is afraid of a dog?" said one lady, carried a sweet little pup in her arms, and she patted the nose of Turk and cooed him until Turk would not step up to the kennel, and having read of his achievements in the A. A. Club, took him to a parlor and pet him at large times. Instantly the brute seized her by the arm and fastened his teeth deep into her flesh. She screamed aloud, and Miss Minnie Hawk and Sarah, the actresses, both of whom are dogs, ran to the rescue, whipped off the dog, and the lady was taken, in an insensible and bleeding condition, to her carriage.

BY C. C. STARKWEATHER.

Do I love thee? Oh, my darling,
Ask my throbbing heart!
Ask the springs of tender feeling
When the tear-drops start.

Do I love thee? Let me answer
In a long career,

Do I love thee? Hear me whisper:
Love thee, dear! Yes!*

Do I love thee? Ask the morning
If it loves the sun;

Ask the nightingale a-calling,
When the day is done,

If it loves to ease the passion
Of the burning breast!

Ask the child on its mother's
Heart it loves to rest.

More than illes love the water,
More than streams the sea,

More than drops love roses,

Love thee! Love thee!

Love thee, truly, love thee fondly,
Love thee, sad or gay,

Love thee? Yes! I'll love thee sweet,
Forever and a day!

The Supreme Court before adjourning adopted some modifications of its rules, in substance to the following effect, i.e.: The Districts are to be called in their numerical order and one week is to be given to each district. The first District is, however, not to be called until the second week of May. Monday and Tuesday of that week are to be given to the examination of applicants for license to practice law. The call of cases at the end of the docket will begin with the term of the first District, and the cases of the second will be called after the end of the week set apart for such district will go over to the next term and not, as now, to the end of the docket.
